READINGS	25
1. The Ethics of Community-Based Sanctions	25
Andrew von Hirsch
In this essay, Andrew von Hirsch explored the ethical dilemmas faced by increasing the use of noncustodial sanctions.

2. What Influences Offenders' Willingness to Serve Alternative Sanctions?	33
David C. May and Peter B. Wood
In their seminal work, May and Wood explored the impact of demographic, correctional experience, and attitudinal indicators on the willingness of offenders to serve community-based sanctions in lieu of one year of incarceration.
3. When the Policy Becomes the Problem: Criminal Justice in the New Millennium	42
Sara Steen and Rachel Bandy
In this reading, the authors pointed to the necessary conversations that states need to entertain regarding the need for policy reform in light of diminishing resources and the pursuit of punishment and enhanced public safety.

17. *The Effectiveness of Community Service Sentences Compared to Traditional Fines for Low-Level Offenders 389

Jeffrey A. Bouffard and Lisa R. Mufti

Using a quasi-experimental design, Bouffard and Mufti sought to examine whether participation in a community service program lowered the likelihood of recidivism both while in the program and post-release.

18. *Day Reporting Center Completion: Comparison of Individual and Multilevel Models 401

Amy Craddock

In this study, Craddock sought to evaluate the likelihood of completing a day reporting center program for 14 of North Carolina's 41 programs based on the impact of individual characteristics, program participation, and program characteristics on the likelihood of completion.

19. *Under Surveillance: An Empirical Test of the Effectiveness and Consequences of Electronic Monitoring 413

Kathy G. Padgett, William D. Bales, and Thomas G. Blomberg

In this extensive work, the authors tested the effectiveness of both radio frequency (RF) and global positioning system (GPS) monitoring on 75,661 offenders placed in home confinement in Florida between 1998 and 2002.
